Boy Scouts Implement Drainage Project

By Chris Schrager

With the help of two groups of Boy Scouts and their parents, the project that brought new roofs and gutters to Kentucky Camp's historic buildings has been completed. Using funds from the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act (the so-called "stimulus money"), the Coronado National Forest contracted to have the 20-year-old wood roofs replaced with new fire-resistant shingles. But with the soil at Kentucky Camp prone to erosion gullies, we needed to make sure that the runoff would be directed away from the building foundations and pathways.

In early 2011, a group of Boy Scouts and their parents helped the Friends begin the drainage project. Under the leadership of Eagle Scout candidate Alex Clabourne, the group dug a trench around the northeast corner and north end of the Headquarters Building. Drainage pipe was laid into the trench on a bed of sand, and connected to three downspouts from the ends of the new, historic-look half-round gutters. Then the trench was filled. At the same time, other scouts and parents set some masonry blocks upright in the slope in front of the building, to help reduce erosion gullying that has been slowly cutting into that area.

During the trenching process, the wooden front steps to the Headquarters Building were removed – and substantial rotting was discovered on the wood that was on or near the ground. As a result, there are now new steps – of pressure-treated wood, to last longer – leading into the building.

Some creative drainage pipe routing was required in order to dodge some buried historic plumbing.

A second Eagle Scout project helped complete the overall roof drainage project. A team of Scouts led by Evan Cipra installed pipe to take the runoff from the southeast and southwest corner downspouts away from the building.

Also, during this phase of the project, downspout drainage pipes were laid for the Gold Processing Building and Cabin A.

Thanks to all the Boy Scouts and their parents whose service projects have done so much to help preserve Kentucky Camp, and make the visitor experience more enjoyable. C'mon out and see all the improvements soon!

Site Status Report

In addition to the downspout drainage project, we've continued to make good progress in many other areas around the site. Here are some photos that show some of the key accomplishments.

The old plastic sink outside the Headquarters Building has taken a beating from many years in the Arizona sun. A donated cast-iron/porcelain replacement has been installed.

A cruel joke. (No hot water exists at this sink.... The hot water knob isn't connected to anything!)

Chris Schrager, Kathy Makansi and John Weiss reposition gutters to better catch the rain.

Pete Van Cleve rebuilds the front steps on the Headquarters Building.

April Work Week

Plans are well underway for a week-long gathering at Kentucky Camp to tackle some of the bigger projects that are too big for the monthly volunteer days. (Technically, this will not be a "Passport in Time" event since those are Forest Service sponsored events)

This year's event will be the last full week in April: the week of 4/23 through 4/27. Accommodations are tent camping with access to our "five star" solar shower facilities or bring your RV. We anticipate putting together a group meal plan or you can plan your own. We are still looking for a few more folks to round-out a team of 12. Here are the projects we are planning:

- We'll remove the existing manta (cloth) ceiling in Cabin C and install a new drywall ceiling. We'll also reinstall the exposed electrical conduit into the adobe walls.
- Interior plastering in the small room in the Gold Processing Building.
- We'll scan Forest Service slides into our digital photo archive. We will also scan hard copy photos that anyone else would like to contribute.
- Apply sacrificial adobe coat to Gold Processing Building and Cabin C.
- Refurbish Cabin C patio sink – rebuild adobe wall underneath and replace the "countertop"

Contact Mark Doumas at doumas@mindspring.com if you are interested in participating and can commit to attending for the full week.

Snow on Cabin C handrail from the 2010 work week.... Hoping it will be a bit warmer this year!

Friends of Kentucky Camp on Facebook

If you like the social networking web site, Facebook, you'll be happy to know that we now have a Facebook page for Friends of Kentucky Camp. On this Facebook page, you can post comments, pictures, videos and have online discussion with other folks with similar interests.

To find the page from your Facebook session, simply search on "Friends of Kentucky Camp" and "like" the page. You'll recognize the familiar profile picture drawn by Vaughn Stadtmiller of the Gold Processing Building:

Among the initial posts on the page are a couple of video clips. (Which don't work too well in hardcopy newsletters!) One video is from the 2009 Open House, the other the time-lapse video of the Headquarters steps being rebuilt at the March 12, 2011 volunteer day. (Very entertaining!)
